THE RIOT IN OHIO.

Desperate Miners Resort to Force to Carry their Point.

MORE PARTICULARS OF THE RECENT AFFRAY.

Governor Hoadly Makes a Visit to the Scene and Appeals to the Strikers—the Militia Ordered Out—Etc.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 1.—A special to the Commercial Gazette from Nelsonville, Ohio, says: At midnight, Saturday, 300 or 400 masked men, heavily armed, appeared at Snake Hollow for the purpose of seeking revenge for many insults thrust upon them since the strike began. Their appearance was a signal for firing from the guards, which was promptly and vigorously returned by the attacking party. Firing continued very brisk for a few minutes. When the smoke cleared away it was found that O'Hara, from Logan, who was acting captain of the Snake Hollow guards, was lying dead with several bullet holes in his body. Two other guards had received slight flesh wounds. It is not known whether any of the miners were wounded. None were left on the field. It is said the attacking party had ropes with which to hang blacklegs, who had been repeatedly warned to desist from working, and that they had actually placed ropes around the necks of two men.

This morning David Woody, a miner living at Nelsonville, was arrested on a charge of complicity in the Saturday night attack and sent to Logan on a special train and placed in jail. The body of the dead man has been forwarded to Logan.

COLUMBUS, Sept. 1.—The military are being held for further orders. The Lancaster company is at Logan guarding the jail. The Circleville and New Lexington companies have been taken by special train to Lancaster, and all the rest of the troops ordered out are being held at Columbus. The governor has just left on a special train for the scene of the trouble, and will investigate the matter for himself, and then send the troops if he thinks necessary. They can reach that point in one hour and thirty minutes.

HOADLY'S MOVEMENTS.

CHICAGO, Aug. 31.—A Columbus, Ohio, special says: Governor Hoadly arrived from Cincinnati at midnight and ordered out the militia. Special trains were sent from the city for troops in adjacent towns. From the best information gathered from the operators it is believed that the worst of the situation in the Hocking valley has not been reported. The fact that communication is cut off and that none of the troops can get to the scene of the riot much before daybreak lead them to believe that there may be a great loss of life and destruction of property before morning. It is the general opinion that all the acts of desperation will be done to-night, and that after the troops have arrived there will be a suspension of acts of violence until they are removed. Then they anticipate the outbreak will occur again, as the operators are determined to put in foreign labor and machinery. A large number of Swedes were to be put into the Longstreet to-morrow, and at this place the trouble is at the worst stage to-night. The governor and those around him look on the trouble as one that will be put down with great difficulty, owing to the fact that the strikers will be orderly so long as the troops are there and break out again after they have been withdrawn. There are 11 Pinkerton men from Chicago on duty at various points. They are well armed, with sixteen shooting muskets, and a large amount of ammunition was sent them to-night. Twenty-seven of these men alone at 1 o'clock to-night repelled a mob of several hundred men.

ANOTHER SPECIAL.

LOGAN, Ohio, Aug. 31.—Governor Hoadly arrived here at 2 A. M. and was met by Sheriff McCarty at the depot. Everything was quiet, and after holding a short interview, both retired with the understanding that they would meet at 10 o'clock to talk over the situation. McCarty told the governor that he expected further trouble and wanted men on the ground, though he had no apprehensions to-night, further than some shooting and cutting between this point and Longstreet. The governor pressed questions closely and told the sheriff that he had four companies of militia waiting, but they would not be ordered to move until to-morrow afternoon. In the meantime they would go down among the strikers and endeavor to hold a consultation with the leaders. The company at Lancaster has arrived and is placed on duty in the jail yard. Some one told Hoadly early in the evening that the trouble was due, in a great degree, to political affairs, and he concluded not to order the troops by to-morrow until he has investigated fully.

ALL QUIET IN THE VALLEY.

LOGAN, Ohio, Sept. 1.—Everything is quiet in the valley this morning, and communication is in good shape. This morning it is learned that there was considerable firing early last night between the strikers and the guards at Sand Run and Longstreet. It is not learned yet that any person was injured.

The governor arrived here on a special train early this morning, and is disposed to learn all he can about the situation before ordering more troops on the ground. He was accompanied by his private secretary and a representative of the associated press. The governor held a consultation with the sheriff and leading citizens of Logan this morning. He says he has formed no definite conclusion as yet from the talk he has had, but will make the circuit of the mines to-day, and try to see the leaders of both sides. He will be accompanied by the sheriff, Judge Friesner and others.

Frank Woody, in jail here, arrested for participation in the riot Saturday night and for shooting William Hart, one of the guards, made a full confession this morning, in which he has given the names of five or six leaders in the attack Saturday night. Sheriff McCarty will furnish the names of those implicated as soon as arrests can be made. Woody is in jail here, and the presence of militia about the jail seems to have the effect of making him weaker.

HOADLY HOLDS INTERVIEWS.

STRAITSVILLE, Ohio, Sept. 1.—Judge Friesner, of Logan, who is in consultation with Governor Hoadly, thinks the worst of the trouble in the valley is over. The governor says Friesner is charged with a great deal of responsibility, and considers his opinion of considerable force. The governor left Logan at 9:30 for a trip to the principal mining towns. Before leaving he telegraphed to all points that he wanted to meet prominent miners, and hear their side of the story. At all stations a large number of miners were out to meet the train, and at this place about 500 had congregated. The greatest interest prevailed, and the governor held private consultations with representative miners. The president of this district, and others who were questioned, deny stoutly that there is any necessity for the military at this point. The governor told them that he does not want to be forced to order military [illegible]

Myers and Fredericks, two amateur athletes just returned from Europe, were arrested yesterday for fighting.

IN PENNSYLVANIA.

COAL CENTER, Pa., Sept. 1.—The sheriff did not call at the miners' camp to-day, and in consequence the strikers are still on the ground and as determined as ever. Neeld's mines were not visited to-day, and the officers on the ground had a quiet time. A call was made to attempt to influence the workingmen, but the men [illegible], after a peaceful consultation, declined to come out. The event of the day was the arrival at Courtney of a number of Hungarians for the purpose of going to work at the Garfield mine. No Hungarians have heretofore been employed in this district and their advent at this time is regarded with concern. A camp will be established at Courtney to-morrow to prevent them from going to work. The strikers say if the strike continues much longer Hungarians will be introduced in all the mines.

THE MARKETS.

OUTLOOK FOR THE AUTUMN TRADE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—Special.—The Commercial Bulletin publishes an exhaustive survey of the outlook for the autumn trade, based upon information derived from well informed sources. The season opened with encouraging indications of fairly active and not unprofitable business. The quantity of merchandise shipped to interior points is under last year's average, though the freight shows it to be more general in its character, and a large proportion has gone to remote interior points, which before have drawn supplies from intermediate sources. The dry goods trade is better, and a more hopeful spirit is apparent in the interior. The jobbing trade, particularly that of the west, has started up briskly. Stocks are so small at the distributing points that the commission houses anticipate a steady demand for some time to come. There has been a large influx of retail buyers from eastern cities the past fortnight, and jobbers are doing very fair business, but the retailers, like the jobbers, are buying less freely than in former seasons, despite bountiful crops and the exceptional cheapness of textile fabrics.

Wool has made an improvement and holds it, and now acts to indications from the dry goods market. No one, however, expects a rush on.

The leather trade is looking dull and unsatisfactory. Manufacturers are producing only what the markets may require, and buy material in a most cautious manner.

Groceries have taken a final turn for the better. Interior stocks are known to be rapidly running out. Coffee made the first move and has been followed by teas, sugars and molasses, all showing increased sales at hardening values.

THE NEW YORK MARKETS.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Governments firm. Railways lower. Shares opened firm and higher, but soon became depressed. There were rallies at intervals, but in the main the market was heavy. Unfavorable rumors concerning granger earnings, and the publication of quarterly reports of the New York Central and other roads were used to bring about the downward movement. In final transactions granger and Trunk Line shares were weak, while Union Pacific, Missouri Pacific and Western Union were somewhat firmer. Compared with Saturday closing prices are ½ to ¾ lower.

New York, Sept. 1.—Money, [illegible] closed at [illegible]. Prime paper, [illegible]. Exchange, bills, weaker at $4 8[illegible]; demand $4 84.

While a rough and tumble fight between Doane and McCarney was progressing Brown attempted to help his partner, seeing which a half-witted employe of McCarney, named Dean, brained Doane with a [illegible]. Brown immediately emptied three chambers of a revolver into Dean, who, he was himself felled to the ground by a shower of blows from an iron poker in the hands of McCarney. The latter surrendered to the authorities. Dean and Brown are both dying. Doane's death was instantaneous.

A PECULIAR TRAGEDY.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—A Press special from Hazelton says: In Stanton, a mining village, Peter Slawolsky this morning killed his daughter-in-law, who had given him some berries for breakfast which Slawolsky did not want and the daughter-in-law said he must eat. He then fatally stabbed himself.

TRAIN WRECKED BY ROBBERS.

Some Interesting Statistics.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Professor J. R. Dodge, statistician of the agricultural department, has issued a book upon the industrial economy of the United States, which presents some striking results of his investigation of statistics of the manufacturing and agricultural production of the country for twenty years. Within that period, owing to labor saving machinery, agriculture has more than doubled its production with a smaller proportion of farm labor, and there will be a glut of farm products unless this proportion shall be further reduced. The question of an outlet to foreign markets is discussed, and it is shown that the surplus of food products merely pays for imported food, and that trade cannot be extended without a ruinous reduction in price. The distribution of labor in occupations in this and other countries is shown, with reference to comparative thrift and progress. It is found, invariably, that an inequality of the distribution of industries retards development; that exclusively agricultural nations are always poor. The phenomenal progress of the "central west" is presented in deduction from statistics, showing that half the cultivated area of the United States lies in a fourth of its territory. The fact is shown that the Ohio valley is the most fully occupied body of land, Ohio having 96 per cent. of her surface in farms; Indiana 89, Illinois 88, Kentucky 85, and no other state as much. It is shown that already three-fifths of the manufactures of the United States are produced in the central west, in less than three-tenths of the area of the country, within half a century of its settlement.

Advance in the Price of Teas.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Special.—The war in China has already caused an advance in teas, both in this city and in London. Last week 30,000 chests of black tea, including Foo Chow, Amoy and Formosa, were sold here at an advance of 2 cents per pound over the price prevailing before active hostilities were commenced. In London the prices of tea have advanced nearly 2 cents per pound. Active dealers in this branch do not anticipate very violent fluctuations in prices this autumn, as a large proportion of this year's yield is already shipped. It is, however, the French should close up Formosa, it is said by those well posted that there will be a large advance in the price of black teas.

Refugees from a Cholera Port.

NEW YORK, Sept. 1.—Special.—Among the steerage passengers who applied for passage on the Normandie at Havre were thirty people who came from Turin, a cholera port. Passage was refused them, but through a ruse or scheme their baggage was put on board and brought over. The health officer declined at first yesterday when the Normandie arrived to issue a permit to land the steerage passengers, but when the captain offered to keep the Turin baggage on board until it had been fumigated, the ship was allowed to proceed. The baggage will be taken back to Havre.

THE AUSTRIAN FLAG.

The Pittsburg Chief of Police had no Right to Order its Removal.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 1.—The attempt of Chief of Police Brown, some time ago, to compel the Austro-Hungarian Consul Schamberg, stationed at this city, to take down the Austrian flag, because he regarded it as a violation of a municipal ordinance prohibiting street obstructions, has been taken cognizance of by the Austrian government and the state department of the United States, as the following correspondence will show:

EXECUTIVE DEP'T, COMMONWEALTH OF PA.,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
TUESDAY, Aug. 26, 1884.

Hon. Andrew Fulton, Mayor of the City of Pittsburg—Sir: I have the honor to submit to you the enclosed copy of a communication received this day from Frederick T. Frelinghuysen, secretary of state, Washington, D. C., in regard to difficulties pending between the Austro-Hungarian consul at Pittsburg and the chief of police of the same city, and to request that it receive your prompt attention and that you communicate to me at your earliest convenience the result of your action in this premises. Respectfully yours,

ROBERT E. PATTISON.

FROM THE STATE DEPARTMENT.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, August 1, 1884.

His Excellency, Robert E. Pattison, governor of Pennsylvania—Sir: Baron Schaeffer, minister of Austro-Hungary at this capital, recently brought to the attention of this department the fact that on a recent ceremonial occasion, that of the anniversary of the birthday of his majesty, emperor of Austria and king of Hungary, when the Austro-Hungarian consul at Pittsburg displayed the flag of that nation in front of his consulate, he was peremptorily ordered by the chief of police to take it down, it being displayed in violation of a municipal ordinance which prohibited the hanging or swinging of signs or of street obstructions. Mr. Schamberg, the consul in question, refused to remove the flag, claiming that he had the right to hoist it, in pursuance of existing treaty stipulations between the United States and Austro-Hungary. In an interview between Baron Schaeffer and Mr. John Davis, assistant secretary of state, it was suggested that Mr. Brown, chief of police of Pittsburg, might have acted in ignorance of the consul's rights under the treaty, and the baron having received a report that the flag had remained, through the day, seemed disposed to adopt that charitable view, and allow the matter to drop without further notice. Baron Schaeffer, in a note to me of the 2nd inst., states that the chief of police has pushed the matter so far as to sue the consul for disobeying his orders, and has taken out Mr. Schamberg's arrest, and under these circumstances invokes the interference of the department.

THE LAW.

The fourteenth article of the consular convention of July, 1870, between the United States and Austria-Hungary, provides that "consuls general, consuls, vice consuls and consular agents shall be at liberty to place over the outer door of their respective offices the arms of their nation with the inscription consulate general, consulate, vice consulate or consular agency, as may be. They shall also be at liberty to hoist their flag on board vessels employed by them in port for the discharge of their duty."

It is unnecessary to observe to your excellency that under the constitution of the United States the treaty in question is part of the supreme law of the land, and has the same force and effect as a statute of the United States, and is to be respected and observed in the same manner, any state law or municipal ordinance to the contrary notwithstanding. I have the honor, therefore, to request that your excellency will bring the subject of this correspondence to the early attention of the superior authority of [illegible]

War Notes from the Soudan—Arrest of a Young American in Canada—German Ship Wrecked—Etc.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—A Times Foo Chow dispatch of this date says: The Chinese blockading of Linn Foo is a useless precaution. Admiral Dowell of the English navy was fired upon recently, and the English consul narrowly escaped from the viceroy of Yamen in Chinese costume. The French hope and believe that the programme of bombarding Foo Chow and then leaving will involve the Chinese with neutral powers. Admiral Courbet and Lespes have consequently left the city. Two French gunboats remain. Admiral Dowell is stationed near the Pagoda.

A DENIAL.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—The report that China had formally declared war against France is without foundation. Prime Minister Ferry has gone to Saint Die, for a week's holiday, which implies that further immediate complication with China is not likely to occur. Admiral Courbet has left the Isle of Matsou, and is believed to have gone to Hai-Nan. Four hundred French troops have been ordered from Cochin China to Kelung.

CLAIMS HONORABLY PAID.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The Times' Hong Kong dispatch this date says: The Chinese have honorably paid the French seamen claims after Foo Chow has been bombarded. French ships saluted the Chinese flag on day previous to the Foo Chow attack, it being the emperor's birthday. Foreign residents severely censure the French for entering Min river with the banner of friendship flying.

NOT DISCOURAGED.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—A private dispatch from Tien Tsin says: China is not disheartened. The government has issued an edict encouraging the troops to fight, and warning local authorities everywhere to protect friendly Frenchmen.

NAVIGATION SAFE.

HONG KONG, Sept. 1.—Admiral Courbet announces that he has completed operations in Min river and it is now safe for merchant vessels to ascend to Foo Chow.

MARK LANE REVIEW.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British corn trade, says: The English corn harvest began and ended under unusually favorable conditions. Although the yield of the wheat crop is reported variable, the condition of the crop is excellent. Wet and colder weather somewhat improved the tone of the market to-day. Sales of English wheat the past week were 57,811 quarters at 35s 1d, against 56,347 quarters at 43s 2d the corresponding week last year. The market for foreign wheat is unimproved. The demand is at the lowest possible ebb, and values are nominal. During the week seventeen cargoes arrived. Seven were sold, seven were withdrawn and six remained. The trade forward is inanimate.

POLITICAL PARAGRAPHS.

There is one man that General Butler knows is all right, and he is never ashamed to mention his name, either.

The Boston Herald declares that, in reading Cleveland's letter, "one feels sure that its author means all that he says." He could not well mean less.

The New York democratic press continues to ridicule Butler, while in Michigan and other places democrats and Butler men crawl into the same bed and spoon.

The New York Sun is witty with the absence of wit when it declares that the nomination of Butler will not disrupt the democratic party, as the nomination of Grover Cleveland did it.

For one who stands so small a chance of having to endure the annoyance of a first term in the presidential office, it seems superfluous that Mr. Cleveland should concern himself with the question of eligibility to a second term.

Even St. John, the comparatively immaculate temperance candidate has not been able to escape the taint of scandal—and there is a woman in the case, too, from whom he was divorced years ago. The story was dished up by a clergyman.

In an interview a New York horsecar driver thanks Cleveland for his veto. He says: "When drivers have to work seventeen hours a day they can lay up money because they have no time to eat or to spend it. But you bet I will vote upon it in November."

If the campaign of abuse is kept up with its present vigor by the independent democratic organs of New York, Mr. Blaine's railing and assassination may be set down among the sure things. Some classes of abuse are of more political value to the object than a barrel.

The democratic Albany Times is disgusted with the so-called "independent" movement, and mournfully complains that the democrats have again been sold out to a "miserable little squad." The nomination of Cleveland was at the bidding of that same "miserable little squad."

The Courier-Journal is trying to make its readers believe that the colored voters of Kentucky are organizing in the interest of St. John and prohibition. The Courier-Journal has taken this tack because the meanest thing you can say about a man in Kentucky is that he favors prohibition.

The Indianapolis Sentinel persists in saying it wants a speedy trial in the libel suit, but it fails to make an answer, though informed repeatedly by Mr. Blaine's attorneys that they are ready for trial at once. The Sentinel advertises itself as in no hurry. It chooses to live at least until the end of the campaign.

The Rev. Dr. George E. Ball, of Buffalo, N. Y., who was one of the ministers interested in looking up the past moral record of Grover Cleveland, has brought suit for libel against the New York Sun, and its weekly issue, the Evening Sun, laying the damages at $25,000. The trial will take place as soon as possible. Dr. Ball expects to prove what he said of Cleveland and use the charges in defending himself.

The Campaign in California.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 1.—Special.—The republican campaign demonstrations have been quite general so far in this state, but they have been wholly voluntary outbursts of local enthusiasm. The central committee is arranging for a grand formal opening of the campaign next Thursday night. Meetings are to be held simultaneously at all large towns in the state.

Charles F. Bassett, chairman of the campaign committee, states that never before has the city been so well provided with speakers or so thoroughly equipped with effective campaign material. He says it is proposed to force the fighting at every step.

Following is the programme for Saturday evening next: San Francisco, W. W. Morrow and M. M. Estee; Stockton, Thomas Fitch; Grass Valley, A. G. Booth and J. G. Sutherland; San Bernardino, A. A. Sargent; Sacramento, Creed Haymond; Marysville, D. McClure and C. L. Hart; San Jose, C. N. Felton and John F. Swift; Modesto, H. C. Dibble; Salinas City, F. M. Markham and L. V. Sanders; Redwood City, D. J. Murphy; Auburn, H. K. Watson and M. E. Hornes; Santa Rosa, ex-Judge F. D. Wheeler; Merced, ex-Governor George L. Woods; Santa Cruz, George A. Knight; Dixon, A. P. Van Duzer and J. M. Dudley; Napa, Dr. Benjamin Shurtleff and C. E. Jackson; Vallejo, Harry V. Morehouse; San Luis Obispo, F. Adams and V. A. Gregg; Pacheco, J. McKenna and L. B. Misner; San Diego, W. A. Cheney; Woodland, Dr. H. Vernon and G. L. Johnson; San Rafael, E. L. Preston; Susanville, T. L. Carothers and Calvin Edgerton. Most of the speakers named will continue on the stump, going from county to county, till the day of election.

New York.

This is to certify that I am well acquainted with a man fifty years of age, for many years a resident of this city, who has been at times extremely ill, but could not tell from what cause, unless it was worms. He told his attending physician his suspicions, but the physician at once ridiculed the idea and refused to attend him any longer. His son then mentioned Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, and asked him if he would take it; his reply was—I must take something to get relief or die.

They at once procured a bottle of Dr. C. McLane's Vermifuge, and he took one dose. The result was he passed upwards of three quarts of worms, cut up in every form. He got well immediately, and is now enjoying excellent health, and, like the good Samaritan of old, is endeavoring to relieve his unfortunate neighbors. [illegible]

ESDAY MORNING, SEPTEMBER 2, 1884.

A TALK FOR THE TIMES.

Present quotations of wheat, if the article can be said to be quotable at all, mean that our farmers throughout the northwest are likely to realize less than fifty cents a bushel. This will make close work even for such as are out of debt; while for those who owe money, and especially those who are mortgaged, it makes a serious case; and with some it may be feared a hopeless one.

It is useless to go back over the past to lament its mistakes, but it is profitable to review the past to draw lessons for the future. If prudence, economy, industry and good sense were more evenly distributed, wealth would be also. We are passing through the same stages of experience as other new communities have passed through before us. The first settler bought the land at the government price, or it was given to him by the government. One set of purchasers has succeeded another, each becoming in turn involved and forced to sell, and meanwhile the land has been steadily going up in value, till much of it is now worth from $20 to $50 an acre. But in the hands of almost every owner it has been mortgaged, and is under mortgage still. The interest that has been paid has eaten up one owner after another; for even the lowest rate of interest the farmers as a class cannot afford to pay. If they could borrow all they wanted even at 5 per cent. per annum, as a general rule they would fail. Borrowing money demoralizes almost everyone who falls into its seductive ways. No man is as prudent and careful of borrowed money as of that which he has earned by hard work and saved by self-denial. When a man once gets into the habit of borrowing money he is done for, as a general thing. He loses his independence, and with it his pride and ambition. Very naturally, he curses the lender, rather than himself. While it is true that almost everyone, at some time in his life, finds it apparently necessary and to his advantage to borrow money, yet there is not one case in ten where this is done that it ought to be done. Almost everyone wants to appear richer than he is and to do a little speculating to back up the pretension. It is a weakness of the American character, and it is time it were known, confessed and cured.

While these remarks may be properly applied to all sorts of people there are none who have need more than our farmers to consider the subject which they involve. Money borrowed to buy more land when the borrower already has more land than he can cultivate; a debt incurred to build a finer house than prudence would afford; a note given to obtain some new patent invention which has been taken at a higher price than it was worth because it could be had on credit; a bill heedlessly run for years at "the store," to secure which a mortgage has at last to be given on the farm—these are some of the introductory steps to years of embarrassment, which too often end in wearing the farmer out and forcing him to sell and to move to pastures new.

This is all trite enough, undoubtedly; and it may be said that people who are in debt know enough about it without reading it in a newspaper. So they do. But all the experiences of life are trite enough. There is nothing new. All the paths we follow have been trodden by innumerable feet of those who have gone before us; but it is just as well to consult the guide-boards as we go along in order to see whither these paths lead. The man who is tempted to mortgage his farm ought to be reminded that no man can be said to own a farm that is covered by a mortgage. He is only a tenant for a term, or a tenant at the will of another, with merely a contingent interest in the products.

Some think the trouble is with the tariff; others think the railroads chiefly censurable for it; others again condemn the money lenders as the source of all the trouble, and argue that the whole system and fabric of society and government are organized and controlled to oppress the "debtor class." Some again think they see a way out through unlimited greenbacks or depreciated silver dollars. But the fact is their trouble arises from themselves. With many of them, if they could pick greenbacks from the trees, or dig up silver dollars like potatoes, they would be in debt all the same. They would be buying injudiciously, buying more than they wanted or what they didn't want at all, and they would fancy they were rich because they did not realize or think of how much they owed.

The considerate and prudent lender grows rich out of the inconsiderate and imprudent borrower. It takes a great many people running heedlessly into debt to build up one millionaire, and the fact that millionaires are becoming so numerous shows rather sadly how fast the classes who make them are multiplying too.

The Boston Herald says that no administration can be much better than the party which has placed it in power, and that all attempts to demonstrate that Gov. Cleveland is better than his party, and therefore worthy of election, and that Mr. Blaine is worse than his party, and therefore deserving of defeat, are puerile and illogical in the last degree. In order to support Cleveland consistently, therefore, the Herald is obliged to argue that the democratic party is more deserving of the confidence of the people of the United States than the republican. This is a question which it is entitled to debate, and which it discusses, in the main, with great ability and fairness. The Herald puts the controversy where we contend that it should be placed, though taking the opposing view as to its merits. The two great parties differ in character and policy, and the question is which one is best calculated to maintain and advance the general welfare.

A stronger feeling in the market has already resulted from the recent closing of many of the factories in New England and other sections of the country. This has not been confined to the east, but factories in Georgia, South Carolina and elsewhere have followed or set the example. It is estimated that more than three million spindles in New England have ceased to produce, and the Mercantile Journal is of the opinion that "altogether the stoppage and curtailment has taken from the market during the month of August alone a supply equaling the production of four millions of spindles." This cannot be long maintained without causing an advance in prices, and indeed it is noticeable that some of the mills that have continued to run are more than usually busy, while a healthy and welcome sign of the time is a fairly active demand for cotton fabrics for the export trade.

The recent riots in Cincinnati have already produced the needed result. The criminal law is now administered with a commendable vigor. Six murderers are under sentence of death, three have been convicted of murder in the second degree, and six of manslaughter. In only two murder trials have the juries failed to agree, no motions for new trials have been granted, and no murder trial has occupied more than a week. During the same time more than a hundred thieves and other offenders have been convicted and sent to the penitentiary, while the municipal laws have been executed with a rigor not known for many years.

Attention is called to the list of meetings to be addressed by Hon. M. C. George during this month and next. These are the first appointments for the campaign. Others will follow. Many speakers have signified to the state republican committee a willingness to participate. Among others the presidential electors will make a thorough canvass of the state. The campaign on the part of the republicans will soon be fairly opened, and then it will be pushed till the day of election. There is to be no relaxation of effort by reason of the state being considered sure in any event for Blaine and Logan.

MONOPOLIES AND THE POLICE POWER.

Just before the close of its recent session the United States supreme court rendered a very important decision respecting the police power of the states. The decision is of a good deal of importance, also, in its bearing on rights of property and contracts under the constitution. It has also a special interest from the fact that it relates to the famous New Orleans "slaughter-house cases," which were the first in which the fourteenth amendment came before the court for construction. In 1869 the Louisiana legislature passed an act to incorporate the "Crescent City Live Stock Landing and Slaughter house Company," which required the slaughtering of animals to be done within specified limits outside of New Orleans, and gave this company the exclusive right of carrying on the business within this district for a period of twenty-five years. This legislation created a gigantic monopoly, and compelled more than a thousand persons to abandon their business. It was complained of as an unjust discrimination against citizens and a violation of the equal privileges guaranteed by the fourteenth amendment. The case was carried to the supreme court of the United States, which upheld the legislation on the ground that it was a legitimate exercise of the police power of the state. It was decided that under the police power, that is, the power to provide for the public health and the general security of person and property, a monopoly of this sort could be created by any state. In the court below Judge Bradley held that the monopoly was unconstitutional under the fourteenth amendment, which declares that all persons born or naturalized in the United States, and subject to its jurisdiction, are citizens of the United States, and of the state wherein they reside, and that no state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of the citizens of the United States, nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law, nor deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws. The supreme court did not sustain the judge, but held the act to be constitutional under the "police power." Its decision, however, was made by a bare majority of one. Four of the nine justices dissented, maintaining that the monopoly was as contrary to law as it was to right and justice.

For the purpose of getting over this decision the state of Louisiana in 1879 adopted a new constitution, which vested in municipal authorities the power to regulate the slaughtering of live stock, and abolished the monopoly features in the charter of any corporation existing in the state, "save such as may be obtained in the charters of railroad companies." Under the authority of the new law the municipal authorities of New Orleans threw open the slaughtering business to general competition. The Butchers union slaughter house company and other establishments were started in the district where the Crescent company had secured a monopoly under the act of 1869. The latter concern claimed that the grant of its rights made by the legislature of 1869 was an inviolable contract for twenty-five years, which could not be broken without violating the federal constitution. This view was sustained by the Federal circuit court in Louisiana.

The supreme court, on the other hand, while admitting that there is no question as to the existence of the contract or the impairment of its obligation, holds that the contract may be impaired under the very same power by which it was created—that is, the "police power." They concede "that such a law, so long as it remains on the statute book as the latest expression of the legislative will, is a valid law and must be obeyed, which is all that was decided by this court in the slaughter house cases." But they insist upon "the right of the legislature to repeal such a law or to make a new one inconsistent with it, whenever in the wisdom of such legislature it is for the good of the public it should be done." This is that well known but undefined power called the police power, which no legislator can barter away. The court say: "We have not found a better definition of it for our present purpose than the extract from Kent's Commentaries in the earlier part of this opinion: 'The power to regulate unwholesome trades, slaughter-houses, operations offensive to the senses,' there mentioned, points unmistakably to the powers exercised by the act of 1869 and the ordinances of the city under the constitution of 1879. While we are not prepared to say that the legislature can make valid contracts on no subject embraced in the largest definition of the police power, we think that in regard to two subjects so embraced it cannot by any contract limit the exercise of those powers to the prejudice of the general welfare. These are the public health and public morals."

The New York Evening Post says: "The curious thing in this case is that there is nothing on the face of the opinion to show that the public health in New Orleans would be at all safer with the slaughter-house business in the hands of several companies than in the hands of one." It is possible that the Post fails to comprehend the extent of the meaning intended to be conveyed by the words "public health and public morals." The new law of Louisiana, which the court sustains is distinctly directed at the "monopoly" feature of the contract. That feature was plainly opposed to "public morals," if public morals as is commonly supposed, are equivalent to public justice. We have no doubt that monopolies, as we attempted to show in an article a few months since, are prejudicial to the general welfare, and that the state, in the exercise of its police power may abate them as nuisances. We do not venture to say that this was precisely the view of the court in making its decision, although it seemed to lean encouragingly in that direction.

"TURN THE RASCALS OUT."

H. W. S

This is the campaign cry of the democratic press. Labored attempts are made to support the cry by the assertion that the general government is conducted in a most prodigal and profligate manner, and that the economy and the honest management which the democratic party would introduce are just what the country sorely needs.

It is beyond doubt that much public money is uselessly or wastefully spent. Some, indeed, is dishonestly appropriated or made away with. At the same time all who know anything about the business of the general government know very well that its officials have been held to a more rigid accountability during the last dozen years than at any former time in the history of the country. Widely as the operations of the government have been extended, defalcations are far less frequent than at any former time.

It is not too much to say that there is more political rascality in New York city than in all the rest of the union. That city is and has been during the whole life of the republican party completely under the control of the democratic party, and it has been most corruptly governed; yet from the democratic organs of that city emanates most of the talk about turning the republican rascals out. The New York World recently said:

> "The people will bear steadily in mind that the great objects before the country are to restore simplicity and honesty to the government, to punish public robbers, to check the dangerous advance of centralized power, to curb the license and correct the abuses of unscrupulous corporations, to stop special legislation for privileged classes, and to relieve the people of needless taxation, so that the money now wasted on corruption or accumulated in the treasury may remain in the pockets of the people, and that the cost of living may be reduced. Turn the rascals out!"

Would it be pertinent to suggest that excellent places to make a beginning in this policy of turning the rascals out would be New York city and Chicago? If these cities are to be taken as samples of the simplicity and honesty of administration which the democrats expect to inaugurate in the national government, the people will not have any remarkable anxiety for a change at Washington.

The population of New York city is about 1,400,000. In 1880 the city had a bonded debt of $133,560,0[illegible]9. Were the national government administered on the same principle its debt would be five or six thousand millions of dollars. New York has been robbed for many years in a most systematic manner, and its debt continues to go up and up, notwithstanding the unparalleled sums raised every year by taxation of the second richest city in the world. The money finds its way into the hands of the men appointed to office by the democratic rule that to the fellow who can show the most votes the disposal of the offices belongs. New York city is an ever existing illustration of the fact that democrats are opposed to anything in the nature of a surplus, and that they are equally opposed to paying off debts. The democrats in that city are never simple enough to allow any such complications to arise. They believe in making a surplus impossible by getting at the funds early in the day. They are fine fellows to talk of honesty, economy and simplicity. But they would be glad to apply their New York notions to the national government, all the same.

The Central City coal and iron mine of Kentucky having hired 200 convicts for their mines and discharged 200 of the old miners, the trades and labor assembly, composed of workmen in and about Louisville, have voted unanimously to boycott the company and all industries backed by its officers, including two newspapers, a paper mill and a horse railroad. In some mines these convicts are put at work side by side with free labor, and in others the convicts are forced to go into poisonous and dangerous places where free labor is seldom found. It seems strange that after all the agitation of past years there should be such an abuse of the convict labor system in some of the southern states. The reason for it doubtless is that a majority of the convicts are colored people whom the whites have not yet learned to treat with humanity.

The Brooklyn Eagle says: The fires of the Butler of former days have gone out, and only these smouldering embers remain. The old man in his decline recalls Johnson's couplet:

> "From Marlborough's eyes the streams of dotage flow,
> And Swift expires, a driveler and a show."

The New York Sun is the only paper of much importance that makes a hero of this great American humbug.

According to the American Law Review, railroad passes are, "in the great majority of cases," given to judges because the judges ask for them, and the companies feel that they cannot afford to incur the ill-will of public men who have power to do them a great deal of harm.

A political speaker says: "The shortest road to celebrity nowadays is to advertise your conscience in the newspapers."

THE WHEAT QUESTION.

POLK COUNTY, Aug. 30

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

Threshing in this county is being pushed rapidly, and will probably be finished by the 5th or 6th of September. Fall sown wheat in the valley counties (especially red chaff) is somewhat discolored, but all the grain grown on the uplands is plump and of fine color. The yield beats all I have ever known in Oregon since 1852, and will to some extent make up for the extraordinarily low price this year.

There is great complaint among farmers at the scarcity of money, as harvest hands have to be paid, and the money is hard to obtain. I see that various doctors are giving their opinion of the patient called "Hard Times," but it seems to me that, by some strange oversight, they all miss the proper cause. It is not so much what a man makes or earns, as it is of what he is obliged to pay out of that which he has made or earned. Truly speaking, the income of our farmers in this valley are sufficient, but his outlays are of necessity a little more so.

This is caused by our infamous tariff system. The actual cost of producing a bushel of wheat in an average year is about 60 cents. Now if that would purchase its 60 cents worth of goods the farmer would be all right, and almost everybody in Oregon would prosper; but now look at the facts. Take the average duty of 43 per cent of 60 cents and the bushel of wheat has a purchasing power left of 35 cents minus all fractions. Anybody ought to be able to see at a glance that agriculture is bound to go to the wall under such a system. If, as some would have us to believe, the people of the United States are very prosperous under our present tariff, the farmers can not be embraced in the word "people," but it must only mean the manufacturer. I fear Oregon has only seen the beginning of the "hard times," and that the end is far from our view.

"Children," said the fond mother, pushing them away, "run over yonder where the goat carriages are, and play until I send for you."

CITY.

[illegible] TIME.—The O. R. & N. Co.'s boats [illegible], Orient, Dixie Thompson, Bonita [illegible] and E. R. Thompson departed from and [illegible] on time yesterday as usual although [illegible] were short handed, a number of deck [illegible] and waiters having concluded not to accept [illegible] wages. Travel to and from the shore [illegible] is good for the season, the Wide West [illegible] her special trips and has been [illegible] one of the principal officers of the boats [illegible] positions, and it is probable that [illegible] be no interruption to travel. There has [illegible] unpleasant feeling between the men leaving [illegible] officers of the company. The deck [illegible] been cut down to $40, which was the [illegible] years when business was good, but it [illegible] satisfactory now, so the men quit, as [illegible] a perfect right to do. A number of deck [illegible] cooks and waiters who have quit [illegible] with the O. R. & N. Co. on account of [illegible] of wages held a meeting last evening [illegible] agreed not to go to work at the reduced [illegible] meeting will be held soon and a [illegible] made to organize a cooks and waiters [illegible]

[illegible] ARRESTED.—E. G. Roth, a carpenter [illegible] the corner of Thirteenth and Mill streets, a [illegible] known by the name of Brandstetter, was [illegible] evening by officer Ellwanger on a charge [illegible] and battery preferred by his wife Mary. [illegible] She stated when she came to the police office [illegible] had struck her and kicked her and the [illegible] out of the house and taken possession [illegible] to allow them to enter. When the [illegible] he turned and again struck her [illegible] face. Ellwanger's blood boiled and [illegible] difficulty that he restrained himself from [illegible] on the brute, but he brought him to [illegible] and preferred a second charge of assault and [illegible] against him. The judge will give the fellow [illegible] regarding the matter to-day. Oh for [illegible] of the stocks and whipping post.

[illegible] SMITH.—The county court yesterday [illegible] petition of Dr. W. Penn Smith and [illegible] to change his name to Dr. W. Penn Ag[illegible]. [illegible] court desired to fully understand the [illegible] such a change being necessary or desirable [illegible] the matter fully set forth in ornate [illegible] counselor Wm. Foley. It appears that Dr. [illegible] Smith, has lost various letters containing [illegible] sums of money on account of there being [illegible] Smiths and has also been put to serious [illegible] in other ways. There is a celebrated [illegible] the last named Agnew, one of those who [illegible] President Garfield in his last illness. It is [illegible] that no trouble may arise from one of [illegible] being taken for the other.

[illegible] CLOUDS.—The weather appears to [illegible] unsettled condition. Rain threatened on [illegible] the sky being overcast and the wind south. [illegible] toward evening the clouds cleared away [illegible] morning the sky was again threatening [illegible] a very slight sprinkle fell. During the [illegible] the wind veered round to the north and [illegible] cleared once more. This is the time of year [illegible] begin to be common and prospects of [illegible] but it usually takes a good deal of [illegible] to break up the weather. The barometer [illegible] steadily at about thirty and everything [illegible] fine weather till the end of harvest. In [illegible] the bulk of the grain should be safe in [illegible]

[illegible] KILLING OF DEER.—Some time since [illegible] was made in these columns of the destruction [illegible] in southern Oregon by a gang of skin [illegible]. Some idea of the extent of the destruction [illegible] by these scoundrels may be derived from [illegible] an OREGONIAN reporter yesterday saw [illegible] Front street 1000 deer skins purchased [illegible]. The animals from which the skins [illegible] were not fully grown. The skins would [illegible] half a pound each on an average [illegible] sell for only about 30 cents per pound [illegible] as if the wanton slaughter of the [illegible] profitable business. It should be [illegible], if there is any way of doing it.

[illegible] MIXING DRINKS.—Louis Bargman [illegible] aboard more liquor than he could [illegible] the Jefferson street ferry slip to [illegible] yesterday. He had not figured on his disability [illegible] so became waterlogged and sank. He [illegible] by the captain of the ferry and Po[illegible] coming along chartered an express [illegible] by the help of the bystanders lifted [illegible] his load of whisky and water therein [illegible] the whole to the city jail. He ought [illegible] bailed out if any one had, but no one [illegible] the job.

[illegible] FOR AUGUST.—Arrests were made by the [illegible] during the month of August as follows: Drunk [illegible], 77; disorderly conduct, [illegible]; keeping [illegible] house, [illegible]; violating license law, [illegible]; [illegible] assault and battery, 15; resisting an officer, [illegible]; roaming the streets, 14; deserting, [illegible]; [illegible]; vagrancy, 8; insane, 1; abusive [illegible], 13; larceny, 17; carrying concealed [illegible]; assault with a dangerous weapon, [illegible]; maintaining a nuisance, [illegible]; bestiality, [illegible]; [illegible] repair sidewalks, [illegible]; threatening to kill, [illegible]; total, 275.

[illegible] THEFT.—Complaint is made that a [illegible] geranium planted by a grave in River [illegible] cemetery a short time since has been dug up [illegible] away. It is difficult to imagine who [illegible] guilty of such sacrilege and the thief [illegible] aware that there is a law especially for [illegible] punishment of such a crime. The person who [illegible] plant will never have any pleasure with it [illegible] better return it. It was the favorite flower [illegible] by whose grave it was planted and was [illegible] as a token of loving remembrance.

[illegible] WARRANTS.—The president of the board [illegible] commissioners yesterday made a requisition [illegible] Curry for the sum of $[illegible] for the ex[illegible] of the fire department. He wished a separate [illegible] drawn for each member of the department [illegible] auditor declined to do and there was quite [illegible] argument over the matter, but as the aud[illegible] [illegible] by the president of the council, he [illegible] point. If he were obliged to make [illegible] warrants for each member in all the de[illegible] he would need a warrant clerk.

[illegible] MARKET.—Although the close season for [illegible] ended at midnight on Sunday the market [illegible] well supplied yesterday with young [illegible]. They are nice birds, rather small [illegible] their [illegible] plumage gives an indication of the brilliant [illegible] assume when full grown. The party [illegible] on Sunday shot fifty-seven [illegible] over in Washington territory [illegible], not a mallard having been seen [illegible] may look out for a hot time next Sunday.

[illegible] TO HARRISBURG.—Mr. Justice Miller of [illegible] States supreme court held an informal [illegible] at the chambers of Judge Deady yesterday [illegible]. About twenty-five members of the bar of [illegible] paid their respects to the eminent visitor [illegible] entertained by a number of anecdotes [illegible] and lawyers. He afterward sat in the [illegible] States circuit court until the hour for his [illegible] to the east arrived.

[illegible] AND LOGAN REGIMENT.—Republicans [illegible] in the organization of Blaine and Logan [illegible] for the regiment now forming will please [illegible] enlistment rolls at W. T. Atwood's [illegible] of Ash and Front streets for the First ward [illegible] a store south east corner of First and [illegible] streets for the Second ward, and at [illegible], 32 Yamhill street, for the Third ward.

[illegible] LOSS.—The work of adjusting the losses [illegible] & Macbeth by the late fire is in progress [illegible] adjusters are Ben Selling for [illegible] and R. C. Bandey for the [illegible] The adjusters are W. [illegible] and [illegible] is going along favorably [illegible] will occupy about a week.

[illegible] COURT.—Johnny Diamond [illegible] negro minstrel, was fined $10 for [illegible] language. Mrs. Mary [illegible] a charge of drunk and disorderly [illegible] of Policeman Hickey proved [illegible] judge sentenced her to [illegible] third story for eighty days [illegible] just the same [illegible] given a pass to leave the city.

[illegible] COUNTY FUNDS.—The [illegible] for Multnomah county [illegible] and adjourned [illegible] business to be taken [illegible]

[illegible] PRESENTATION.—Yesterday Mesdames Dick [illegible] and Hill waited upon Mrs. George W. [illegible], wife of the former pastor of the Taylor street M. E. [illegible] church, whose departure for San Francisco is much [illegible] regretted, and on behalf of the lady's numerous [illegible] presented her with a handsome gold watch [illegible] engraved as a token of the high esteem in [illegible] she will always be held by those with whom [illegible] has been so intimately associated during her [illegible] stay in this city.

[illegible] PASSENGERS.—The following passengers [illegible] leave here to-day by Pacific express: W. H. [illegible], Jennie Hadal, Nellie O. Dodd, Mr. [illegible], G. E. Erwin and wife, W. Fisher.

WOUNDED BURGLAR STILL ALIVE.—The man shot by Dr. J. B. Pilkington in his house yesterday morning is still alive in the city jail and there seems but little change in his condition. He at first held the idea that a great hole had been blown in his back and frequently asked: "Oh God, when am I going to die?" Scores of people visited him and raised his shirt to look at his back until finally he inquired of one of them: "What does the place on my back look like?" When told that it was peppered all over and looked something like a sieve he seemed to feel relieved and afterwards said it wasn't as bad as he thought. From this time on he became more independent in feeling and hadn't as much use for a priest as he had before. He seems to think he will get well, and perhaps he may, but it is [illegible]. Some of the shot undoubtedly [illegible] lungs and the spine must [illegible] injured. There is little if any [illegible] sympathy expressed for the wretch and his death would [illegible] increase it. Burglaries have been too frequent of late for people not to feel that a remedy [illegible] live [illegible] nearly every [illegible] prosperity for burglars and it is only because people [illegible] wake up quick enough that more house breakers are not shot.

THOSE CONFOUNDED CHINESE.—[illegible] Chinatown was wild with excitement yesterday over one of those oft occurring cases of alleged abduction of a Chinawoman. It appears that [illegible] Chung, president of the Hip Yi Tong [illegible] highbinders persuaded a wife of [illegible] Chung, a big fat merchant, to leave him and she was quartered in a lodging house on Morrison street. [illegible] Chung found out where she was and had her arrested on a charge of larceny. Her bail was furnished and she went home with her husband. Then the highbinder swore out a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that she was restrained, and Sheriff Jordan took charge of her and started for the jail. Immediately several hack loads of Chinamen were in his trail yelling and blowing police whistles. The woman will stay in jail till the case is settled, but who is to be tried or on what charge is not known.

THANKS FOR LIBERTY.—A sergeant in charge of a prisoner visited the Gambrinus garden on Sunday, where both partook of beer. The [illegible] prisoner with a desire for liberty [illegible] quickly hopped the [illegible] across the meadow [illegible] toward [illegible] The sergeant started in pursuit and fired two pistol shots at the fugitive, who was finally run to earth in a barn near the brick yard. The sergeant reproached his prisoner with ingratitude for thus repaying his kindness [illegible] The prisoner replied [illegible] with [illegible] staring me [illegible] away from my brother [illegible] The sergeant seemed to have a kindly feeling for his prisoner [illegible] to report the attempted escape for which [illegible] the prisoner appeared very grateful. They took the stage for Vancouver yesterday.

NEW COASTING STEAMER.—The new coasting steamer Coos Bay, built at Marshfield, arrived here yesterday from San Francisco via Coos [illegible]. Her dimensions are: Length over all 144 feet, length of keel 136 feet, breadth of beam [illegible] feet, lower [illegible] 13 feet, hight between [illegible] feet. She has accommodations for 40 first cabin, [illegible] after cabin and [illegible] steerage passengers. Her staterooms and dining saloon are neatly and comfortably furnished, the [illegible] being arranged for the [illegible]

PROBATE COURT

Minor Matters Regarding Certain Estates Now being Considered by County Judge Stearns—The Albright Heirs

Yesterday in the probate department of the county court Judge Stearns passed upon several applications and issued certain orders as follows:

Hearing of the final account of the administrator of the estate of John Donner, deceased, was postponed until Wednesday, September [illegible].

In the matter of the estate of Jacob Fisher, who was killed by William Bloss, it was ordered that a citation issue in the petition to set aside realty and the time for a hearing of the matter was set for [illegible] day of the next regular term of the court.

The final account of the administrator of the estate of [illegible] was read and approved and the administrator was discharged.

In the matter of the estate of Patrick McMahon some objections were made to the final account of the administrator which were sustained in part by the court, and it was ordered that the administrator proceed to the distribution of the estate in accordance with the terms of the will immediately.

The sale of certain real estate belonging to the estate of N. O. Lusk, deceased, by the administrator was confirmed by the court.

The petition for the admeasurement of dower in the matter of Kate S. Albright vs. the Albright heirs was considered by the court and such a step being found necessary, James Strong was appointed guardian ad litem of the child.

AMUSEMENTS

"LA BELLE COQUETTE."—The Fay Templeton comic opera company made their reappearance here last evening after a week spent in the Sound country in Audran's new opera, "La Belle Coquette." The story is similar to that upon which Shakespeare's "All's Well that Ends Well" is based, which in its turn was doubtless taken from one of Boccaccio's legends. It is that of a young and pretty [illegible] peasant girl who grows up with a handsome scion of a noble house and learns to love him. He however is some what of a Lothario, as Italian counts often are, and leaves her and joins the army of King Rene of Naples. She in the disguise of a street singer seeks the king, whom she cures of ill, and to whom she imparts a remedy for his malady. In his gratitude he promises her anything she may ask. Meanwhile she has met Count Hector and he has renewed his vows of love to her. She asks of the king to give her in marriage to the count and much to the count's dismay and disgust, who has merely thought to have an amour with her, the king commands him to marry her. He obeys but leaves her on their wedding day, swearing never to acknowledge her as his wife until she shall wear a certain ring which he prizes [illegible] and wears upon his own hand. The remainder of the opera is devoted to incidents which follow her efforts to possess herself of the ring, in which by a strategy she succeeds and the count having been held a prisoner for several months returns to find her holding possession of his house and rights, she playing the role of the Countess de Sgnolle. By her indifference and [illegible] she brings him to really be so of his misdoings; he acknowledges his errors and reconciliation takes place. There is a rather amusing sub-plot sustained by the character of Trifarelli (Harry Brown) and Rosita (Miss Lillie West), giving out the clandestine marriage of the two and the persistency of the latter in flirting with every handsome young man she meets.

Of the opera itself we cannot speak very highly. It has little if any music that appeals to popular taste and that can be called taking. With the exception of the soldiers' chorus in the second act [illegible] there is hardly a chorus that can [illegible] a song, while the concerted music and the solos are not compare in musical quality with those of the author's other productions—Olivette and Mascotte.

The opera however was well rendered and in point of costuming and mounting was all that could be desired. Miss Templeton in the triple role of Laurette, Lieutenant Girar and Countess di Sgnolle scored another success, though we can not help thinking if she would throw away some of that Castleton abandon and affectation which she seems to affect and be more refined in her vivacity that her success would be more marked.

Harry Brown as Trifarelli was excruciatingly funny while Miss Lillie West as Rosita was most piquant and charming. She is an arch actress and adds greatly to the strength of the cast. The Count Hector de Sgnolle of Sig. George Olmi was, musically considered, the best performance of the evening. He was in good voice and his rich baritone notes showed well in the song "Forever and Forever," which he introduced in the third act. Prince Oliver by Miss Alice Vane was also a capital personation. She possesses a good contralto voice which she uses with judgment and her work is always carefully and conscientiously done. The chorus was good and went as smoothly. To-night "Giroflé Girofla" will be presented.

BRIEF MENTION

Regular meeting of the Ladies' Relief society at [illegible] o'clock this afternoon.

The Gilman house messenger force has been increased by the addition of a boy who will remain on duty all night.

Fannie Dawson, keeper of a bagnio, was arrested yesterday by Policeman Wing on a charge of selling liquor without a license.

The O. R. & N. Co.'s train from Walla Walla ran over and killed a tramp in the yard at Wallula Junction yesterday morning.

The Bishop Scott grammar school will begin to-day at 9 o'clock. Parents are requested to send their children at this time, that the work of organizing the classes may proceed without delay.

[illegible] Cole, Jr., founder of the defunct Northwest [illegible] has left the city. It is said he proposes to reside in New York. He was a [illegible] no earthly use anywhere, so it matters but little where he goes.

The quantity and style of trout now arriving here from the Cowlitz river would be a surprise to sportsmen of less favored countries. Hundreds of them are received daily, many of them weighing two [illegible] pounds each. They are plump, well fed looking fellows.

Some little excitement was caused in the vicinity of [illegible] and Washington streets yesterday by a pistol shot. No [illegible] could be found and it was at last ascertained that the noise was caused by [illegible] passing over and exploding a cartridge [illegible] on the street.

SALEM NOTES

SALEM, Sept. 1.

County court convenes in this city to-day.

The M. E. conference adjourned at 10 A. M. to-day.

The time for registration of pupils for our public schools has been set for Thursday, Friday and Saturday next.

Rev. E. A. Andrews, formerly a professor of the Willamette university in this city, died at Evanston [illegible] on the 14th inst.

The sale of booths at the state fair grounds was largely attended on Friday last although prices ranged rather lower than usual.

[illegible] Willamette university and Miss Teresa D. Ar[illegible] school both opened this morning. The [illegible] schools will not open until Monday next.

[illegible] P. Ready, representative elect from Benton county, is in the city. He reports matters progressing rapidly with the Oregon Pacific railroad.

[illegible] Baptist Church Association of Roseburg [illegible] articles of incorporation in the office of [illegible] secretary of state with Jas. Gladue [illegible] Simpleton and W. F. Owens as trustees.

A. B. Croasman, wife and daughter of [illegible] returned home [illegible] from a trip to San Francisco. [illegible] outlook in California and considers the state sure for Blaine and Logan.

Miss Hester McGee died in this city yesterday of consumption after a long and painful illness. She will be buried at [illegible] P. M. from the residence of her brother, Samuel McGee. Rev. J. W. Spriggs, Christian church, officiating.

At a regular meeting of the board of road [illegible] held on Thursday evening last exempt certificates were issued to [illegible] Barker of Capital Engine Co. No. 1 and J. [illegible] Tiger Engine Co. No. [illegible] Frank E. Hodgkin was elected secretary of the board [illegible] resigned.

Governor Moody has recently made the following appointments: [illegible] Garwood [illegible] Warm Springs [illegible] [illegible] Kingsley [illegible] Abraham [illegible] A. Mallory [illegible] Frank A. Vince [illegible] captain [illegible] lieutenant, James D. [illegible] Company B, First regiment [illegible] Oregon state militia [illegible]

CHEHALIS NOTES

CHEHALIS, W. T., Aug. [illegible], 1884.

H. J. Daily has just bought a lot of 150,000 [illegible]

The Episcopals will soon have their building completed.

Thomas Moir and wife, Miss Agnes Moir and Miss Connell, of Portland, have been visiting friends in this place.

The [illegible] have leased Wm. [illegible]'s new hall for three years. Their lodge at this place is increasing in numbers.

The defalcation of W. D. Pittenger at Hillsboro is painful news to his many friends in this locality. Great sympathy is expressed for Wm. H. Weatherred, his late partner, who is a heavy loser.

The democrats will hold a county convention next Saturday to elect delegates to the territorial convention which convenes at Walla Walla September 10 to nominate a candidate for delegate to congress.

The new Baptist church was dedicated to-day. Rev. [illegible] preached the dedication sermon. The building was crowded to its utmost capacity. In the afternoon a large number of people assembled on the banks of the Chehalis and witnessed the baptism of Misses Sarah and Mary Winston and Mrs. E. Jackson. The day was a pleasant one and everything passed off pleasantly.

I would advise [illegible] and other crack sportsmen of Portland to come to this county and take a hunt. Pheasants and grouse were never so plentiful before. [illegible] of Napavine recently killed forty-three in less than six hours. Bears are also troublesome. About [illegible] have been killed within the past six months. [illegible] were killed last week. Come over ye Portland hunters and get some bear meat.

Kelsey Bros. are still working their [illegible] and feel more encouraged than ever. They say that the color is favorable. These men have been working their mine for four years and have a tunnel [illegible] feet into the mountain. They have expended besides their time $5,000 and have received $1,700 from the sales of stock. It must be that they have struck it rich, or they could not afford to spend both time and money in working the ledge. If men with large capital should take the matter in hand I am confident it would be an excellent investment. And speaking of capitalists I will say that there are many openings in this county for such.

THE OLD HOME.

It sleeps beneath the sunny hill
As in a tranquil dream;
The giant elms are spreading still

Wild birds that join in music sweet
And quiet sheep and cows
Find grateful shelter from the heat
Beneath those leafy boughs.

All day among the scented grass
The crickets leap and sing,
And green and golden shadows pass
Like swallows on the wing.

How calmly in the sheltered nook
The summer hours may go,
Yet bright and joyous as the brook
That sings with deep'ning flow.

O world, with all thy cities' pride,
Thy plains and valleys green,
Thou hast not in thy bound'ries wide
So sweet, so fair a scene!

MAB'S KEEPSAKE.

Mab and I had been idling about Tuscany for some weeks with Uncle Wallace, and we had many plans made for more extended journeyings, when our uncle was suddenly obliged to return to England on pressing business. As we could not and would not accompany him, he installed us in a quiet little hotel, gave us a liberal allowance of pocket money and left us with strict injunctions to remain quietly where we were until his return. We were to make no excursions requiring longer than a day's absence—for Uncle Wallace highly disapproved of ladies traveling alone in foreign countries. I was quite old enough to chaperon Mab whithersoever she cared to go; but not being argumentative, I agreed to keep her and myself in strict seclusion until our uncle rejoined us.

But after three days of our own society we both grew horribly mopish. Mab had made crooked little sketches of the old cathedral till we both hated the sight of the hoary edifice; we had tried all the cakes in the little confectioner's, and had read our small library twice over.

"Effie, there's to be a rural fete at San Vito on Wednesday, and I am going," Mabel announced on the fourth day.

"San Vito is eight hours from here," I said, depreciatingly.

"I don't care if it is eighty."

"But think of your promise to Uncle Wallace not to go anywhere."

"We shall be away only one night, and I shall die of the blues if we dont have some amusement."

I remonstrated to the best of my ability, but was overruled in the end, and I knew I should be. Mab, having had her own way ever since she was a baby, was not liable to relinquish her scepter at the ripe age of 20. So the next afternoon, armed with shawl straps and a small valise, we betook ourselves to the railway station and bought tickets for San Vito.

"Mademoiselle should inquire carefully the hours of the trains, as the time tables are often inaccurate on this line," said our smiling landlord as we departed.

Our only fellow traveler in the coupe was a gentleman of about 30. He was reading the Times as we entered, but I noticed that he seemed to take more interest in Mab's pretty face than in the news. Yet he was not the least impertinent, and he apparently imagined that his furtive, but comprehensive glances were quite unnoticed.

Every one admired Mabel—she was like a sea shell, or a tea-rose, or any delicately-tinted, lovely bit of nature—and I could not blame this man for being only human. He had pleasant, dark eyes, with plenty of fun in them; sleek, dark hair; a good length of limb and a look of the patrician about him from the top of his well fitting boot to his finely shaped head.

As the stranger had been thoughtful and kind concerning the disposal of our luggage, and the arrangement of refractory curtains, politeness demanded that I should address him, and we were soon chatting together like old friends. He gave me his card, on which was engraved, "Sidney Weir, Oaklands, Kent," and he gleaned from our conversation that the Misses Washburne of Elham were his traveling companions. It suddenly occurred to me that I was playing the chaperon very badly, in making such advances to a perfect stranger, and I tried to frighten Mab into becoming propriety and reserve; but when I flattered myself that I was looking my sternest, she actually gave Mr. Weir her pretty little hand to hold while he told her fortune in the pink palm.

The subject of bric-a-brac having come up, Mr. Weir produced a curiously carved little silver whistle from his pocket which he said had once saved his life in India. It had a peculiar shrill note, very penetrating and striking for so small an article, and used as a signal of distress, it had brought help when he was overpowered by the enemy. He seemed pleased with Mab's warm admiration of the whistle, and, as she was returning it, he said simply:

"I should be so pleased if you would accept the little toy as a keepsake. I shall only lose it if it continues to jingle about with my keys and small change; and perhaps it would serve as a charm to ward off danger from you on some occasion. Its duty to me is done."

Mab hesitated, but seeing the disappointed look on Mr. Weir's face, she took the little trinket with a smile of thanks, and fastened it to one of her bracelets. I thought it a bold, forward thing to do, but I knew that my opinion or displeasure would make but little difference to my younger sister.

It was growing late as we drew near the station of Gimino, where we should have to change carriages for San Vito. Our companion's destination was a town further along the Gimino line; so we should be obliged to separate. I was secretly pleased; but to Mr. Weir and Mab the time was slipping away altogether too quickly. Arrived at Gimino, we made the very unpleasant discovery that the San Vito train had gone without us, and there would be no other till 5 o'clock in the morning.

"What will you do?" asked Mr. Weir. "I have ten minutes to spare before my train goes; if I could be of any service to you in engaging a room at the hotel, or in any other way, I should be most happy."

"I think it would be better not to go to the hotel," said Mab; "we should never wake up for the early train, and we have not the time to wait for the next one."

"Yes," I answered, "we could get some refreshments here, and stay in the waiting room till our train comes. It is 11 o'clock now, and the time is not so very long. We can take a comfortable nap in the waiting room."

Something in Mr. Weir's manner betrayed that he did not quite approve of our plan, but he was too polite to say anything against it. He called a waiter to attend to our wants, and in answer to the second sharp call from the locomotive took his leave, lingering long over the handshake with Mab, and disappeared in the darkness.

"I wish he hadn't gone. I feel lonely in this strange place," said Mab, with a little shiver.

"Nonsense, child! It would have been obtrusive and indelicate if he had remained. You forget that we are only friends of a day. Why should he alter his plans for us?"

I spoke boldly; but I, too, was ill at ease. The little coffee-room was gradually filling with rough looking men, who watched us—the only women in the place—furtively and curiously, speaking a language which we but little understood. The hotel was a mile distant, and we could not take refuge in it at that hour of the night, even if we had known the way.

"Mab, how foolish of you to wear your diamond ring on a journey of this kind—it attracts attention," I said, in an undertone, as the light caught the brilliant on her finger when she raised her coffee-cup.

I happened to glance out of the window at that instant, and, to my horror, saw a man with evil black eyes and grizzled hair staring intently at Mab and me, with a wicked look about him which I could not forget. As I caught his eye he slunk away in the darkness, and presently the railway porter came to escort us to the waiting room.

"It is against the rules of the road to allow the waiting-room to be occupied at night," he began, "but if you will be content without a light, and with both doors locked on the outside, I have no objection to your waiting here for your train."

This was appalling, to be locked up for five hours in a shabby little Italian waiting-room in total darkness. By feeing the man we prevailed upon him to allow us to bolt the outer door on the inside, so that we should feel a little less like prisoners.

"The guard walks up and down the platform till daylight, so you can feel quite safe," said the porter, consolingly, as he wished us goodnight and shut the door of the dark little den upon us.

I fortunately bethought me of some wax matches in the valise, and, lighting one, for the moment we took in the situation—a mean little room, with a door on two sides, hard benches round the walls, and a long table. Surely not an inviting apartment for repose. We made ourselves as comfortable as the circumstances would permit, and tried to forget our troubles in sleep. But I became preternaturally wakeful. Here we were, two unprotected women, dropped down at this little wayside station for all the long night hours. Suspicious characters were lurking about, and we might be robbed and murdered without our friends ever knowing of our fate. In the midst of our cheerful reflections it consoled me a little to see the guard pass by slowly at intervals, with his lantern gleaming on the red band of his cap.

Suddenly, my ears sharpened by the silence heard a stealthy step approach the inner door of our prison, and the quiet grating of a key in the lock was distinctly audible. My heart seemed to stop beating with fright, and then, to my unspeakable horror, the door softly opened, and the evil-looking man with the grizzled hair whom I had seen through the window of the coffee room, crept in with a dim lantern in his hand.

"Listen!" he said, in a hoarse whisper, fixing me with his wicked eyes. "If you are quiet I will do you no harm, but if you scream or make the least disturbance I know how to silence you. I want the ring your friend's pretty finger wears, and whatever money and other valuables you have about you. Make no resistance as you value your life."

I suppose I grew very white and trembled, for Mab said in a surprisingly firm tone: "Don't faint, Effie, but give the man the valise to search; our lives are worth more than the trumpery it contains."

The robber set his lantern on the table and began undoing the straps of our valise, putting it on the floor before the door at which he had entered. Where was the guard outside, that his light did not shine again through our window? He might have rescued us, but he did not come.

"Effie," said Mab, in a whisper to me—she need not have whispered, for the robber could not understand our language—"I am not going to give up my ring without a struggle. This man evidently thinks the other door locked on the outside and safe against our opening it, otherwise he would not let us stand so close to it. I have my hand on the bolt now there. I have slipped it! I am going to dash the robber's lantern from the table with this bundle of shawls. In the darkness we can rush out on the platform and call the guard. Don't lose your head and try to detain me, for I am quite resolved. Be ready to fly when I give the signal."

Before I could recover from my astonishment at the bold plan, there was a crash of glass upon the floor, darkness, a volley of Italian oaths and my sister and I were tearing madly down the deserted platform.

"Guard, guard!" we shrieked, with all the agony of despair, but from some inexplicable cause he could not or would not hear us, though we saw his form quite plainly in the distance.

Steps were heard in pursuit of us, and the angry curses of the burglar reached our terror-stricken ears, when an inspiration seized Mabel. She put her little silver whistle to her lips and blew till its peculiar note rang out like a clarion on the still air.

The sound of hasty footsteps approaching from another direction became audible, but whether they were for good or ill we could not tell. Mabel had lost her courage and was leaning on me, half fainting, when a voice calling in English "Hello! What is the matter? What are you rascals doing?" seemed to put new life into her.

Two men ran toward us, out of whom, to our amazement and delight, we recognized one as Sidney Weir, our traveling companion.

We clung to him, and hovering over him with tears, hysterical laughter and incoherent thanks, and did not notice that during our explanations both robber and guard disappeared. Mr. Weir said that he had felt uneasy at leaving us alone in the little station, and finding another belated traveler, they had whiled away the night smoking and walking up and down upon the road near at hand. He had not told us of his change of plans, thinking it might annoy us. When he saw the rough lot of men who collected about the coffee room he was very glad he had waited, for he thought we might be subjected to annoyances, if nothing worse. The sound of Mabel's whistle had reached his ears as a signal of distress, and he would never feel sufficiently thankful that he had given her the little toy.

"What I fail to understand is this rascally guard deserting his post so shamefully," said our rescuer, ringing a large bell which hung near.

Presently an astonished group of waiters and porters gathered around us with lights, and began asking a thousand questions. One of the new comers stumbled over something lying in a dark corner.

"What is this?" he cried. "Moses, the guard, in a drunken sleep! He will lose his place for this, and deserves to, too."

It was afterward discovered that Moses, the real guard, had been drugged by two ruffians, one of whom had stolen his lantern and cap, while the other made his daring attempt upon Mabel and me.

We had lost all interest in the fete at San Vito, and, like frightened, disobedient children, our only wish was to return home, if the little hotel that we had left could be called "home." Sidney Weir accompanied us, and when Uncle Wallace returned he found a suitor for Mabel's hand awaiting his approval. The approval was not withheld, as Mab's face betrayed that her face had found its idol.

AN OLD STORY OF DANIEL WEBSTER.

Editor's Drawer in Harpers' Weekly

Everyone who has read George Ticknor Curtis' "Life of Daniel Webster" will remember John Taylor, Mr. Webster's tenant and farmer, at Franklin, N. H., and Robert Wise, the old revolutionary soldier, who came home from the war with Capt. Ebenezer Webster, Mr. Webster's father, and built for himself a little cottage on one corner of the Webster farm, where he lived and died. Skirting the Webster property, and passing by the spot where Robert Wise took up his humble abode, there had long been a ferry way, leading to a ferry across the Merrimac river. The ferry was established during the last century, and after Robert Wise had lived there some time it came to be called Wise's ferry. The ferry-way was first fenced on both sides, and it ran between the Webster farm and a farm belonging, at the time of which we are about to speak, to Dea Farley. The fence on Webster's side of the ferry-way had been allowed to fall into decay, but the fence on the Farley side had been well kept up. In the year 184–, after a bridge had been built across the river, the town voted to discontinue the ferry-way and the ferry, and the land reverted, of course, to the original owner. Dea Farley, assuming that the land belonged to himself, removed all traces of the fence on his own side, and included the whole of the land in his own territory up to the line where the Webster fence formerly stood.

Mr. Webster came up to Franklin soon after this had been done and was greatly incensed by what he saw. He ordered John Taylor into his sitting room and said to him sternly, "John Taylor, how came you to stand still and let Deacon Farley steal my land?" Mr. Webster was in one of his blackest moods. Poor Taylor was frightened, for in all his life he had never seen his great friend in such a towering passion. Mr. Webster ordered him, in tones of thunder, to go and bring Deacon Farley.

The deacon came, and he, too, was saluted with a burst of wrath that made him tremble. He modestly replied that he believed that the land was his; but Mr. Webster could not be pacified.

Thereupon the deacon and John Taylor jumped into a wagon and drove in great alarm to see a young lawyer of the name of Pike, now senator in congress from New Hampshire, who lived two and a half miles up the river. They told Pike that he must go down and see Mr. Webster and try to explain the matter.

Pike went, but as soon as he was in Mr. Webster's presence the latter roared out: "Young man, did you advise Deacon Farley to steal my land?"

"No, sir," said Pike, "I did not. But if the statements that were laid before me are true, the land belongs to the deacon."

"Well, sir," replied Webster, "if I can find a lawyer in this county, I shall bring an action."

"There is no need of that, Mr. Webster," said Pike. "I will get the proper documents and submit them to you, if you will hear me, and I believe you will be convinced that the land is not yours."

"You are a bold man, sir, if you propose to leave the case to me," said Mr. Webster. "But do as you please. I give you fair warning that I consider this land mine and I will fight for every inch of my father's property."

Pike went away and procured a copy of the record which showed the laying out of the ferry-way, and that all the land was taken from the property of Farley's grantor, and none of it from the Webster property, a copy of the vote of the town discontinuing the ferry, and an affidavit of a former tenant of Webster's showing that the fence on the Webster side had been removed, and the whole ferry-way taken into the Webster field. The strip of land which the discontinuance of the ferry-way took off from what Mr. Webster had always regarded as his own property extended the whole length of one of his best fields.

When Pike submitted the documents to Mr. Webster, the latter read them very carefully, and then said: "Mr. Pike, in half an hour the jury will be ready to render their verdict. Go and get Dea Farley, that he may hear it."

In half an hour Pike returned with the deacon, who expected nothing but a repetition of what he had met before.

"Gentlemen," said Mr. Webster, "hearken to the verdict. The jury find that the land is Dea Farley's and is not the land of Daniel Webster. So says the foreman, so say all the jury. And now, Dea Farley, I have an apology to make to you for having treated you very roughly. But I never dreamed that this land was not a part of my father's farm, and you know what my affection for this property is. I was very angry, but I hope you will forgive me."

Generosity Exemplified.

Texas Siftings.

"Couldn't you find room enough for yourself on that bench without pushing that little boy off on the floor?" asked an Austin school teacher of the bad boy of the school.

"I didn't want any room for myself," was the reply. "I wasn't crowded at all."

"Then why did you push him off?"

"To give him more room. He was the boy who was crowded, so I pushed him off to give him plenty of room. There is a great deal more room off the bench than there is on it."

TRADE AND COMMERCE.

MONDAY, Sept 1.

[illegible] were early this morning and afternoon cooled the atmosphere and promoted some moisture. The produce lines continue quiet, and values are generally unchanged. City jobbers are preparing for fall stocks and for the fall trade. Manila cordage has been advanced half a cent, by San Francisco works. The new steamer Coos Bay arrived at [illegible] last night, nine days from San Francisco via coast points. She is owned by the Coast and River Transportation Company of Coos Bay and San Francisco, the Coos Bay Barrel Company being large holders of stock. By the steamer came Captain Hawkins and F. J. Lyle who are interested in the boat and who came along to introduce her and pave the way for future business. They do not expect to compete with Portland as the river coast ports with demand pretty much all the freight room. The steamer carries 400 tons on a draught of eleven feet. She had freight for Coos Bay, Umpqua, Siuslaw and Yaquina, and stopped at those ports. It was expected that she would enter and leave the same day, but a delay by fog off Coos Bay, and tides at Siuslaw, made the trip longer than expected. The company are sure of a good trade with Coos bay. Little can be done with Umpqua, as lumber schooners take in all the supplies needed, but the steamer engaged to take out 1000 cases salmon and a lot of wool. A good trade can be worked up with Siuslaw by a smaller steamer and the company will soon lay the keel for a boat 94 feet in length, to draw seven feet and carry 200 tons. A small amount of trade may be had with Yaquina. Should the steamer have a large freight for the northern ports she will not well enter some of the smaller ports because of the delay in waiting for tides. A small boat to run north from Coos bay will act as a tender to the large one, carrying the freight from and to Coos bay. The depth of water at some of the harbors has been overstated, actual experience showing less water than supposed. The question arises as to what Portland can do with the southern Oregon ports. Captain Hawkins and Mr. Lyle are of the opinion that her merchants can compete with San Francisco and sell goods as cheap or cheaper. Flour, feed, provisions and even other lines may be sent as far south as Coos bay, the intermediate points particularly presenting chances for trade. In return wool, dairy products and salmon may be brought out. Now that transportation facilities are afforded merchants can intelligently look for the trade. There is little reason why Portland cannot branch out and supply the nearest ports at least. The low rate of [illegible] to Yaquina has been [illegible] per ton, now freight station may be had for $4 [illegible] ports are equally low, the company having invested [illegible] in the boat, intending to stay with the proposition.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the last forty years, it has been regarded as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,

MAB'S KEEPSAKE.

Mab and I had been alone at [illegible] for some weeks with Uncle Walter [illegible] we had [illegible] our travels, when [illegible] to return to England [illegible]. As we could not and would not [illegible] him, he [illegible] with [illegible] we were [illegible]. We were to make no excursions [illegible] for Uncle Walter highly disapproved of ladies traveling alone in foreign countries. I was quite old enough to chaperon Mab anywhere she cared to go, but not being argumentative, I agreed to keep her and myself in strict seclusion until our uncle rejoined us.

But after three days of our [illegible] we both grew horribly [illegible]. Mab had made crooked little sketches of the old cathedral till we both hated the sight of the heavy [illegible]; we had tried all the cakes in the little confectioner's, and had read our small library twice over.

"Effie, there's to be a [illegible] at [illegible] on Wednesday, and I am going," Mab announced on the fourth day.

"San Vito is eight hours from here," I said deprecatingly.

"I don't care if it is eighty."

"But think of your promise to Uncle Walter not to go anywhere."

"We shall be away only one [illegible], and I shall die of the [illegible] if we don't have some excitement."

I remonstrated to the best of my ability, but was overruled in the end, and I knew I should be. Mab, having had her own way ever since she was a baby, was not liable to relinquish her scepter at the ripe age of [illegible]. The next afternoon, armed with shawl straps [illegible], we betook ourselves to the railway station, and bought tickets for San Vito.

"Mademoiselle should [illegible]" [illegible] the hours of the trains as the [illegible] hand lord as we departed.

Our only fellow traveler in the [illegible] was a gentleman of about 30. He was reading the Times as we entered [illegible] seemed to take more interest [illegible] have them in the news. [illegible] unpretending, and he apparently [illegible] quite unnoticed.

Every one admired Mab [illegible] I felt [illegible] dark eyes [illegible] friends. He gave her his card, on which was engraved, "Sidney West," and [illegible] he gleaned from [illegible] the Misses Washburne [illegible] traveling companions. It suddenly occurred to me that I was playing the chaperon very badly in making such advances to a perfect stranger, and I tried to frighten Mab into becoming propriety and reserve, but [illegible] myself that I was [illegible] actually gave Mr. West her pretty little hand to hold while he told her fortune [illegible] palm.

The subject of [illegible] Mr. West produced a curious [illegible] silver whistle from his pocket, which he said had once saved his life in India [illegible] sharp, shrill note, very penetrating and striking for so small an article, and [illegible] of distress, it had brought help [illegible] pursued by the enemy. He seemed pleased with Mab's warm admiration of the whistle, and, as she was returning it, he said:

"I should be so pleased if you would accept the little toy as a keepsake. I shall only lose it [illegible] and perhaps it would [illegible] charm to ward off danger [illegible] occasion. Its duty is [illegible]."

Mab hesitated, but seeing the disappointed look on Mr. West's face, she took the little trinket with a smile of thanks, and fastened it to one of her bracelets. I thought it [illegible] forward thing to do, but I knew that my [illegible] would make [illegible] difference to my younger sister.

It was growing late as we drew near the station of [illegible], where we should have to change carriages for San Vito. [illegible] destination was a town further [illegible] line, so we should be obliged to separate. I was secretly pleased, but to Mr. West and Mab the time was [illegible]. [illegible] arrived at [illegible], we made the very unpleasant discovery that the San Vito train had gone without us, and there [illegible] till 4 o'clock in the morning.

"What will you do?" asked Mr. West. "I have ten minutes to spare before my train goes. If I could be of any service to you in obtaining a room at the hotel, or in any other way, I should be most happy."

"I think it would be better not to go to the hotel," said Mab. "We should never wake up for the early train, and we have so little time to wait for the next one."

"Yes," I answered, "we could get some refreshments here, and stay in the waiting room till our train comes. It is [illegible] comfortable [illegible] waiting room."

Something in Mr. West's manner [illegible] that he did not quite approve of [illegible] he was too polite to say anything against it. He called a waiter [illegible] and [illegible] answer to the second summons [illegible] took his leave, [illegible] handshake with Mab and disappeared in the darkness.

"I wish he had not gone. I feel lonely in this strange place," said Mab, with a little shiver.

"Nonsense, child. It would have been [illegible] forget that we are only friends of a day. Why should he alter his plans for us?"

I spoke boldly, but [illegible] was the case. The little coffee-room was gradually filling with rough-looking men, who watched us [illegible] the only women in the place, furtively and [illegible] speaking a language which we but little understood. The hotel was a mile distant and we could not take refuge in it at that hour of the night, even if we had known the way.

"Mab, how foolish of you to wear your diamond ring on a journey of this kind [illegible]," I said in an undertone, as the light caught the brilliant on her finger when she raised her coffee-cup.

I happened to glance out of the window at that instant, and, to my horror, saw a man with evil black eyes and grizzled hair staring roundly at Mab and me, with a [illegible] about him which I could not forget. [illegible] caught his eye he slunk away in the darkness, and presently the railway porter came to escort us to the waiting room.

"It is against the rules of the road to allow the waiting-room to be occupied at night," he began, "but if you will be content without a light, and with both doors locked on the [illegible] side, I have no objection to your waiting [illegible] for your train."

This was appalling, to [illegible] hours in a shabby little [illegible] waiting-room in total darkness. [illegible] to allow us [illegible] that we should be [illegible] like prisoners.

"The guard walks up and down the platform till daylight, so you can [illegible]," said the porter, consolingly, as he wished us good night and shut the door of the dark [illegible] upon us.

[illegible] we took in the situation [illegible] seats [illegible] a long table [illegible]. Here we were [illegible] dropped down at this [illegible] all the long night hours. Suspicious characters were lurking about, and we might be robbed and murdered without our friends ever knowing of our fate. In the midst of our cheerful reflections it consoled me a little to see the guard pass by slowly at intervals, with his lantern gleaming on the red band of his cap.

Suddenly, my ears sharpened by the silence [illegible] a stealthy step approach the inner door of our prison, and the [illegible] of a key in the lock was distinctly audible. My heart seemed to stop beating with fright, and then [illegible] my unspeakable horror the door softly opened, and the evil-looking man with the [illegible] whom I had seen through the window [illegible] coffee-room, crept in with a [illegible] lantern in his hand.

"Listen!" he said in a hoarse whisper, [illegible] me with his wicked eyes. "I will [illegible] will do you no harm, but if you scream or make the least disturbance I know how to silence you. I want the ring your friend's pretty [illegible] her watch, and whatever money and other valuables you have about you. [illegible] if you value your life."

I suppose I grew very white, and trembled, for Mab said [illegible] "Don't faint, Effie," [illegible] the man the valuables [illegible] lives are worth more [illegible] the trumpery [illegible].

The robber set his lantern on the table, and began making the things [illegible] on the floor before the door by which he had entered. When [illegible] his light did not shine [illegible] window. He might have [illegible] had not come.

"Effie," said Mab, in a whisper so low [illegible] need not have whispered, for the [illegible] did not understand our language. "I am not going to give up my ring without a struggle." This man evidently thinks the other door locked on the outside, and safe against our opening it otherwise he would not have dared [illegible]. I have my hand on the [illegible] now, there! I have slipped it [illegible] the lantern from the table with this bundle of shawls [illegible] rush out on the platform [illegible] the guard. Don't lose your head and try to detain me [illegible] be ready to fly when I give the signal."

Before I could recover from my astonishment at this bold plan, there was a crash [illegible] upon the floor, darkness [illegible] oaths and my sister and I were running madly down the deserted platform.

"Guard, guard!" we shrieked, with all the agony of despair, but from some inexplicable cause he could not or would not hear us, though we saw his form quite plainly in the distance.

Steps were heard in pursuit of us, and the angry curses of the burglar reached our terror stricken ears, when an inspiration seized Mab. She put her little silver whistle to her lips and blew till its peculiar note [illegible] on the still air.

The sound of hasty footsteps [illegible] from another direction became audible, but whether they were for good or ill we could not tell. Mab had lost her courage and was leaning on me, half fainting, when a voice called out in English: "Hello! What is the matter? What are you ladies doing here?" [illegible] to her.

Two men ran toward us, one [illegible] amazement and delight, we recognized Sidney West, our traveling companion.

We clung to him, and overwhelmed him with tears, hysterical laughter and [illegible] thanks, and did not notice that during the explanations [illegible] door and guard disappeared. Mr. West said that he had felt uneasy at leaving us alone in the little station, and, finding another belated traveler, they had whiled away the night smoking and walking up and down upon the road near at hand. [illegible] sound [illegible] of men was collected about the [illegible] he was very glad he had waited, for he [illegible] we might be subjected to annoyance [illegible] the worse. The sound of Mab's whistle [illegible] reached his ears as a signal of distress, and he would never [illegible] had given her the little toy.

What I fail to understand [illegible] guard deserting his post [illegible] our rescuers [illegible] near.

Presently at [illegible] were gathered around [illegible] began asking a thousand questions [illegible] a different [illegible].

"What a [illegible]," Mab [illegible] [illegible] a different [illegible] [illegible].

[illegible] to make us [illegible] and me.

We had lost all interest [illegible] West [illegible] at first, and [illegible] only wished to return home [illegible] the little [illegible] when Uncle Walter returned [illegible] for Mab's hand [illegible] seemed when [illegible] that her face [illegible].

AN OLD STORY OF DANIEL WEBSTER.

[illegible]

[illegible] the life of Daniel Webster [illegible] Taylor, Mr. Webster's tenant [illegible] at Franklin, N. H. [illegible] Mr. Webster's father [illegible] during the last century [illegible] had lived there [illegible] called Webster's ferry. The ferry-way was fenced on both sides, and it ran between the Webster farm and a farm belonging, at the time of which we are about to speak, to [illegible] Farley. The fence on Webster's side of the ferry-way had been allowed to fall into decay, but the fence on Farley's side had been well kept. In the year [illegible] a bridge had been built across the river, the town voted to discontinue the ferry-way and the ferry, and the land reverted, of course, to the original owners. [illegible] Farley asserted that the land belonged to himself, removed all traces of the fence on his own side and [illegible] where the Webster fence formerly stood.

Mr. Webster came up to Franklin [illegible] what he was [illegible] Taylor [illegible] Mr. Webster was in one of his blackest moods [illegible] was frightened [illegible] Mr. Webster's [illegible] and being [illegible].

The lawyer came [illegible] with a burst of wrath [illegible] modestly [illegible] that the land [illegible] Mr. Webster [illegible] got back.

Ike [illegible] jumped into a wagon [illegible] to see a young lawyer of the name of [illegible] senator in congress from New Hampshire [illegible] and a half miles up the river. They [illegible] that he must [illegible] Webster and try to regain the property.

Pike went, but as soon as he was in Mr. Webster's presence the latter [illegible] did you advise Farley to [illegible] my land?

"No, sir," said Pike, [illegible] the land belonged to the [illegible]."

"Well," replied Webster, "[illegible] a lawyer [illegible] question."

"There is no [illegible], Mr. Webster," said Pike. "I [illegible] and I believe [illegible] is not yours."

"[illegible]," said Mr. Webster. "[illegible] warning that I [illegible] for that land again, and I will [illegible] every [illegible] of my father's property."

[illegible] went away and produced a copy of the record which showed the laying out of the ferry-way, and that all the land was taken from the property of Farley's ancestor, and none of it from the Webster property, a copy of the vote of the town discontinuing the ferry, and an affidavit of a former tenant of Webster's showing that the fence on the Webster side had been removed, and the whole ferry-way taken [illegible] to the Webster field. The strip of land which the former road of the ferry was [illegible] from what Mr. Webster had always regarded as his own property extended the whole length of [illegible] of his heart [illegible].

When Pike submitted the documents to Mr. Webster, the latter read them very carefully [illegible] and [illegible] ready to render the [illegible] Farley, that he may [illegible].

In half an hour Pike returned [illegible] who expected nothing [illegible] what he had [illegible].

"[illegible]," said Mr. Webster [illegible] The jury find that the land [illegible] Farley's [illegible] Webster [illegible] property [illegible].

Generously Resembled.

An Efficient Remedy

In all cases of Bronchial and Pulmonary Affections is AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. As such it is recognized and prescribed by the medical profession, and in many thousands of families, for the past forty years, it has been [illegible] as an invaluable household remedy. It is a preparation that only requires to be taken in very small quantities, and a few doses of it administered in the early stages of a cold or cough will effect a speedy cure, and may, very possibly, save life. There is no doubt whatever that

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Has preserved the lives of great numbers of persons, by arresting the development of Laryngitis, Bronchitis, Pneumonia, and Pulmonary Consumption, and by the cure of those dangerous maladies. It should be kept ready for use in every family where there are children, as it is a medicine far superior to all others in the treatment of Croup, the alleviation of Whooping Cough, and the cure of Colds and Influenza, ailments peculiarly incidental to childhood and youth. Promptitude in dealing with all diseases of this class is of the utmost importance. The loss of a single day may, in many cases, entail fatal consequences. Do not waste precious time in experimenting with medicines of doubtful efficacy, while the malady is constantly gaining a deeper hold, but take at once the speediest and most certain to cure,
